Our Editorial Visitors.

We continue below the extracts from the different newspapers of the State represented by our editorial visitors

From the Lancaster Intelligencer, July

At three o'clock p m the excursionists bade adieu to the hospitable people of Oil City, and, with the Columbia Band still on board started for Titusville The Oil Exchange of Titusville a body composed of about one hundred and fifty of the most prominent business men of the city, had generously determined to make us their guests To say that our reception was cordial would convey no conception of it it was enthusiastic and almost too grand to suit the tastes of modern editors Along line of carriages, many of them the handsome equipages of private individuals were drawn up at the depot, and into these the editors and their wives were ushered Two fine brass bands were in attendance, and a procession was formed with Messrs J W Humphrey, Samuel Minor, J A Cadwallader and Charles Archibold as marshal, The intention was to conduct the party through the principal streets of Titusville, so as to give the editors and the ladies with them an opportunity to see what had been accomplished in the brief period of a single decade Unfortunately a severe thunder gust swept over the city just after the procession had got fairly under way, and the fine horses which were attached to the carriages were given an opportunity to make best very best time in a race for the hotels After an early supper the carriages were again brought out and the guests of the Oil Exchange were conducted through the principal streets Every reader was surprised to learn that where vast manufactories magnificent stores, costly public buildings and palatial private residences now stood there was only a little country village, of less than three hundred inhabitants, thirteen short years ago In the year 1859 the first oil well was sunk in the section, and from that date the rise and progress of the beautiful and rapidly growing city of Titusville It has a very live population of 15 000 people, with the finest office, school building in the country $60 000 a Soldiers' Orphans School, six banks with a very large bank capital, two very large oil refineries, numerous manufactories, thirty hotels, and stores superior to those of any interior city in Pennsylvania It has three railroads and expects soon to become the great railroad centre of the Oil Regions Its Oil Exchange is composed of men who represent many millions of money, and they are engaged in large enterprises throughout the whole Oil Region It has two large and live morning papers, the Courier and the Herald, both of which are fully up to the time and of the times and both doing a first business The people of Titusville and the surrounding country have undergone various inconveniences in consequence of being compelled to go great distance to attend court, and it is proposed to erect a new county, with Titusville as the county seat Now a man who looks at the rapidly growing city and its surroundings can easily see such a change is imperatively demanded

Quite a number of the editors and their wives were taken to the homes of private citizens, but most of them found very pleasant quarters at the Parshall House and the Abbott House They are both excellent establishments, the former being quite metropolitan in all its arrangements The Oil Exchange had left nothing undone to minister to the pleasure of their numerous guests, and a dancing floor had been erected over the parquette of the Parshall Opera House When the Mayor of the city Hon Wm B Roberts kicked off in the grand march the scene presented was a very brilliant one The floor of the beautiful building was filled with richly dressed ladies and gallant escorts and there were many spectators in the galleries The beauty and the fashion of Titusville were present, and many fair dames and voluptuous damsels were to be seen in the world at many a ball, though the masses still endure at midnight a sumptuous banquet was served in the large dining hall of the Parshall House, and the excursionists were welcomed to Titusville in a very happy speech by Mr P W Garfield, President of the Oil Exchange To this the President of the Editorial Association responded After the banquet the dance was resumed, and kept up into the hours morning

From the Democratic Sentinel Kittanning July 4

The Oil Exchange of Titusville having extended an invitation to the excursionists to stop, hop dine and sup in that wealthy and go ahead city at 3 o'clock p m they took the 4 o'clock train from Oil City on a special train which had never left them in Meadville, arriving in Titusville at about 4 p m, where they were met by a large number of the leading and prominent citizens of that place

In our estimation, and in generous and cordial, our stop at Oil City up hearted and free what language we will left to describe the reception in the province of oil, Titusville? other than that of "grand and glorious" In fact it was a complete and perfect ovation The citizens turned out en masse, carriages both public and private were innumerable, waiting us at the depot, designed to convey the entire party throughout and around the city and then to such hotels as they in their pleasure might select

The cordiality of this reception, the music of two very fine brass bands, together with the qui vive of almost the entire population, rendered a charm and an exhilaration to the scene and its surroundings which it had never before been our pleasure to participate in or experience. And we are free to say here, but of course we say so without disparagement to others, that for generous, impromptu, and consequently honest open hearted hospitality, the Titusville people, through their "Oil Exchange, have no superiors and but few rivals

This unequaled report on to the press of Pennsylvania was followed by a ball in the "Parshall Opera House" and a banquet at the "Parshall House," at which the talent, youth, beauty and wealth of the new Oil or El Dorado shone resplendent

At or a very brief nap, a hasty cup of coffee, and at half past seven o'clock, the excursionists, preceded by the Titusville Brass Band, took up the line of march for the depot, where the same train of cars of the day previous awaited us to convey the party to Pittsburg by the way of the Allegheny Valley Railroad

From the Daily Epitomist, Williamsport, July 2

At Titusville the party was met by a portion of the Oil Exchange and a large number of citizens, headed by the Titusville bands Carriages were provided in ample numbers to accommodate the entire party, with a view of driving about the city as the first order of the programme, but a violent thunderstorm abruptly terminated this part of the exercises greatly to the regret of the citizens and guests, but a more successful attempt at carriage riding came off after supper, enabling the excursionists to get a view of one of the most beautiful young cities in the world

The ball at the Parshall Opera House in the evening was a magnificent affair A false floor, raised several feet, having been erected for that purpose, extending the entire length of the parquette to the stage Coleman's splendid band furnished the music, and the editorial party and their ladies, forgetting the fatigue incident to several days' rowing, and to a great extent lured by the fascinations of Titusville society, crowded the floor to its fullest extent until eleven o'clock, when the announcement was made that a banquet awaited the guests in the spacious dining room of the Parshall House Although going up on short notice, a rich bill of fare was served, and the ample justice done it made it manifest how immensely it was enjoyed While the guests were seated at the tables, Mr P W. Garfield, the President of the Oil Exchange — which was chiefly instrumental in providing the entertainment, though with a hearty co-operation of the citizens generally—rose and addressed a few words of welcome to the guests, which was replied to in appropriate words by the President of the Editorial Association, Mr H G Smith A series of resolutions expressive of thanks to all who had contributed to the enjoyment of the occasion were also offered and adopted After the banquet a large number of the guests returned to the dancing, which was continued we don't know how long, as we retired shortly after the banquet, completely tired out Next morning at eight o'clock the editorial party, both to leave a place where they had been so much feted and feasted, again took the cars of the Allegheny River Railroad, and left a region to which they were brought as dead-heads, were entertained as dead-heads, and from which they were about to depart as dead-heads, for Pittsburgh, where the party was to scatter to their respective homes Nothing specially marked the trip to that city except at Sunbury, well known as an oil yielding locality, where the flags were hoisted and a salute of three anvils greeted the party During a moment's stoppage, the party were regaled to cigars, after which the train proceeded on its way without further interruption. Arrived in the smoky city about half past two o'clock, and about five o'clock we took the Erie & Pittsburgh train for home, almost completely worn out, but filled with pleasing recollections of a three day's editorial bender, which, thanks to the liberality of the different railroad companies, and the hospitality of the places visited, could be indulged in with impunity by the most indignant "black woods" editors, of which, according to the North East Sun, the party chiefly consisted of Titusville and Oil City Shortly after leaving Erie for the Oil Regions, a large package of the morning issue of the Oil City Derrick were distributed gratuitously among the editorial fraternity, closely followed by the Titusville HERALD and Courier Each one of these papers is a true reflection of the wonderful growth and prosperity of the places in which they are published, and decidedly ahead, in every respect, of any other daily papers of the State this side of Pittsburgh Long may they flourish

We cannot close without saying a word about the

From the Beaver County Press

* * The signal was given for another start, the special train was again boarded, and we were soon on our way, per invitation of the Oil Exchange of Titusville, to that liveliest and busiest of modern cities We reached the Titusville depot at 4 p m to find a cordial welcome in the music of two magnificent bands and a large concourse of warm hearted citizens, the principal among whom had brought their elegant horses and carriages along, with the intention of giving the party a drive around the city Under the courteous and sharp sighted supervision of Col Cogswell, of the Herald, who, we should have observed, joined us at Erie, and made the entire trip pleasant and intelligible by pointing out the spots and objects of interest along the route in the sparkling and entertaining way peculiar to him, the guests were soon provided with conveyances, and preceded by the bands, the procession started Unfortunately, however, the fates interposed to prevent the expected drive The heavens assumed a threatening aspect, the murky clouds rose rapidly to the zenith, the gentle summer breezes were quickly transformed into a sweeping tornado, mountains of dust were blown through the broad streets, blinding the eyes and filling the nostrils of horses, men, women and children, while the rain fell in torrents Under such circumstances the ride didn't last long, and the occupants of the carriages were driven rapidly to the hotels and hurriedly put under hospitable shelter

But the people of Titusville were not to be defeated in their plans by the elements No sooner had the storm subsided and the rain ceased, than bands, steeds and equipages, marshals and aids appeared again, and the procession reformed at the Parshall House, and the Association was treated to one of the most delightful evening drives which its members could ask or expect It was our good fortune to occupy a place in the elegant carriage and behind the splendid team of W H Abbott, Esq, one of Titusville's oldest and most enterprising, as well as well by, citizens He is one of the men who has made the town what it is, and deserves especial mention as one of the hosts of the occasion We will not undertake now a description of the magnificent ball of the evening at which the gentlemen of the Exchange entertained their guests at the Opera House, nor the sumptuous banquet at the Parshall House, where the choicest viands were discussed and unalloyed pleasure ruled the hour They were done in Titusville's own elegant style of hospitality which to be understood and appreciated must be personally enjoyed The party broke up at a late hour with many mutu

of metropolitan character. After supper the carriages came round again, and the short shower having laid the dust, a very pleasant and refreshing drive through the city, headed by two bands of music, and accompanied by the three steam fire engines of the city, was a source of intense enjoyment to the guests of the city During this drive along the streets and avenues, and especially through that part of the city containing the private residences of its wealthier citizens, was noticed with astonishment the revolution wrought within the last ten years. The imposing size of the structures in the business centre, the taste and elegance displayed in private residences, the number of its manufacturing establishments, its banks, churches and school houses, the grading of its streets, and many other features forcibly impressed the visitors of the wealth and enterprise of its citizens Here we could not help but draw between Erie and Titusville The former with its best harbor on the lakes, its railroad facilities, its numerous manufacturing establishments, and other natural and artificial advantages took little pains to show them to the editorial visitors, although having been repeatedly importuned, by the local press, as to the importance and benefit to be derived from this gathering, and many of the newspaper men left the city, comparatively but little acquainted with its resources—strangers, as they had come The citizens of Titusville also, are conscious of having a good thing, but they don't propose to "hide it under a bushel," and improved the opportunity by sacrificing a few hours and dollars, well knowing that it would return to them ten-fold through printer's ink They are aware that penny-wisdom on such an occasion would be pound-foolishness, and the result will be that Titusville's praises will be sung the entire length and breadth of the State, acquainting its inhabitants in the most remote districts of the wonders and resources of the metropolis of the oil regions

But to return to the excursion party In the evening the Opera House, a first-class institution of the kind, was prepared for a dance, by laying a false floor, extending the entire length of the parquette to the stage Coleman's splendid band furnished the music, and the editorial party and their ladies, forgetting the fatigue incident to several days' rowing, and to a great extent lured by the fascinations of Titusville society, crowded the floor to its fullest extent until eleven o'clock, when the announcement was made that a banquet awaited the guests in the spacious dining room of the Parshall House Although going up on short notice, a rich bill of fare was served, and the ample justice done it made it manifest how immensely it was enjoyed While the guests were seated at the tables, Mr P W. Garfield, the President of the Oil Exchange — which was chiefly instrumental in providing the entertainment, though with a hearty co-operation of the citizens generally—rose and addressed a few words of welcome to the guests, which was replied to in appropriate words by the President of the Editorial Association, Mr H G Smith A series of resolutions expressive of thanks to all who had contributed to the enjoyment of the occasion were also offered and adopted After the banquet a large number of the guests returned to the dancing, which was continued we don't know how long, as we retired shortly after the banquet, completely tired out Next morning at eight o'clock the editorial party, both to leave a place where they had been so much feted and feasted, again took the cars of the Allegheny River Railroad, and left a region to which they were brought as dead-heads, were entertained as dead-heads, and from which they were about to depart as dead-heads, for Pittsburgh, where the party was to scatter to their respective homes Nothing specially marked the trip to that city except at Sunbury, well known as an oil yielding locality, where the flags were hoisted and a salute of three anvils greeted the party During a moment's stoppage, the party were regaled to cigars, after which the train proceeded on its way without further interruption. Arrived in the smoky city about half past two o'clock, and about five o'clock we took the Erie & Pittsburgh train for home, almost completely worn out, but filled with pleasing recollections of a three day's editorial bender, which, thanks to the liberality of the different railroad companies, and the hospitality of the places visited, could be indulged in with impunity by the most indignant "black woods" editors, of which, according to the North East Sun, the party chiefly consisted

Abraham Lincoln and Horace Greeley—How Mr. Greeley Betrayed the President.

On the 19th of August, 1862, at the time when there was the greatest necessity for encouraging the Union sentiment at the North and upholding the hands of President Lincoln in his trying position, Horace Greeley published in the Tribune a letter to Mr Lincoln, making certain demands in his self-confident manner How his interference was viewed by the President may be judged by the following paragraph from the reply of that cautious and just man, dated August 22:

"HON HORACE GREELEY—Dear Sir I have just read yours of the 19th inst addressed to myself through the New York Tribune If there be in it any statements or assumptions of fact which I may know to be erroneous, I do not now and here controvert them If there be any inference which I may believe to be false drawn, I do not now and here argue against them If there be percept ble in it an impatient and dictatorial tone, I waive it in deference to an old friend whose heart I have always supposed to be right As to the policy I seem to be pursuing, as you say, I have not meant to leave any one in doubt" " " "

On the 7th of July, 1864, Mr Greeley enclosed to Mr Lincoln a letter and dispatch he had received from "Colorado" Jewett, who was at Niagara Falls, in which Jewett said, "Two ambassadors of Davis & Co., are now in Canada with full and complete powers for peace," and requested Mr Greeley to come to Niagara Falls with the president's protection for them to proceed to Washington. In his letter transmitting them to the president, Mr Greeley said there was "a widespread conviction that the government and its prominent supporters are not anxious for peace," and he urged Mr Lincoln to "submit overtures for pacification to the southern insurgents," " " " "if only with a view to the momentous election soon to occur in North Carolina," etc., and concluded by saying, "It may save us from a northern insurrection." With the usual assurance, Mr Greely suggested a "plan of adjustment" In response, Mr. Lincoln wrote, July 9, 1864

"If you can find any person anywhere professing to have any proposition of Jefferson Davis, in writing for peace, embracing the restoration of the Union and abandonment of slavery, whatever else it embraces, say to him that he may come to me with you," etc.

After considerably haggling at the terms imposed by Mr Lincoln, and some additional correspondence, Mr. Greeley proceeded to Niagara Falls, where he opened his famous "peace negotiations," failing to appraise the self-appointed rebel agents of the purport of Mr Lincoln's letter A subsequent letter to Mr Greeley from the President, dated July 15, said that "if they would consent to come on being shown my letter to you of the 9th inst, show that and this to them, and if they will come on the terms stated in the former, bring them" These letters were not shown to the rebel agents by Mr Greeley, but after corresponding with them about until the 21st of July, Mr Greeley showed them a final statement of these same terms, which the President sent to Niagara Falls by Col John Hay, to make sure that it was delivered The fact then came out that the rebel agents had no authority from Richmond at all, and the farce was closed Mr Jewett subsequently made a public statement that "Mr Greeley regretted the sad termination of the initatory step taken for peace, in consequence of the change made by the President in his instructions to convey Commissioners to Washington for negotiations unconditionally" This statement, we will be readily seen, placed President Lincoln in a grossly false position before the people, and he applied to Mr Greeley for permission to publish the entire correspondence, suggesting, however, the propriety of Mr Greeley's references to the "North Carolina election" and the threats of a Northern insurrection, as being likely to infuse into the public mind some of the despondency which Mr Greeley himself felt and openly avowed concerning the prospects of the country" This suggestion Mr. Greeley refused to entertain, and the matter was dropped, Mr Lincoln, in the greatness and goodness of his heart, preferring to suffer the injustice heaped upon him through Mr Greeley's vagaries rather than carry the discussion any farther How the lamented patriot suffered from his confidence in Mr Greeley may be judged by the following extract from a private note addressed by him to the late Henry J Raymond, dated August 15, 1864:

"HIM HENRY J RAYMOND—My Dear Sir I have proposed to Mr Greeley that the Niagara correspondence be published, suppressing only the parts of his letters over which the red pencil is drawn in the copy which I herewith send He declines giving his consent to the publication of his letters unless these parts be published with the rest I have concluded that it is better for me to submit, for the time, to the consequence of the false position in which I consider he has placed me, than to subject the country to the consequence of publishing these discouraging and injurious parts," etc

There spoke not only the statesman, but the man In the light of these recollections in our history, where does Horace Greeley stand? He was, necessarily, looked upon as a man who had a large and commanding influence with the people of the North through his widely circulated journal, and it was natural that Mr Lincoln should desire to retain his support, yet, time and again, he lamented President had to turn from other pressing duties to repel the malicious assaults of this treacherous "friend" It there was one man more than another who embarrassed President Lincoln during the most trying period of the war, that man, unquestionably, was Horace Greeley —Seneca Falls Courier

THE adherents of Mr Greeley give evidence of a sensitiveness new to our presidential contests They have almost exhausted the vituperative words of the vocabulary in seeking for terms in which to express their feelings towards President Grant, but they are ridiculously incongruent if anybody attempts to make use of their presidential candidate To most of them he has been an object of hatred and ridicule for years, but in their new born admiration for him they resent any attempt to quote against him the language they have themselves used He is no longer to be spoken of as the man with the white coat and hat, and with other garments in disarray, and his peculiarities cannot be mentioned except at the risk of mortally offending those to whom they have been a political capital for nearly a score of years We suppose we must gratify the feelings of these gentlemen, who are not to blame for being sensitive, though their own acts and words give them no claim even to the ordinary courtesies of political contests. Mr Greeley is hereafter to be spoken of as a regular patron of the most fashionable of tailors, hatters, and boot-makers, as the most consistent politician, the most courteous editors, and the gentlest of men, who his supporters are to be disturbed by no hints that they are other than the purest of patriots, the most unselfish of partisans, and genuine pinks of propriety in all the relations of life Though they may resort to the use of Chinese slippers in their assaults upon "the minions of Grant," they are to receive in turn only gentle showers of rose-water, mingled with confections and compliments, from the opening of the campaign in Baltimore until its close in November —Boston Traveller

MANY of the Democrats had Greeley a very bitter pill to swallow One of them presents his objections in the Detroit Free Press as follows

1 Upon the occasion of a slight difference of opinion between my party and H G he said I was a d—d fool
2 H said I was a horse thief
3 He said I was a rascal and perjured villain

LAST NIGHTS DISPATCHES

The Stokes Trial.

The first witness in the Stokes case on Saturday was John Moore, who testified that he saw Fisk go in the Grand Central Hotel January 6th Afterwards the boy Redmonds, came out and said Fisk was shot Witness went in and caught the Colonel under his arms No one was present but the two He was just going to ask "Are you hurt?" when Fisk said, "He was too quick for me this time" When witness came out Fisk's colored driver asked him what happened, and, on telling him, he said, "I wondered the old man didn't pull on him, for he was fixed," and afterwards said, "I carried two myself for some time" The cross-examination brought out no contradictions

George A Bailey was next called, but the court could not admit what the defence wanted to prove by him, as to what Stokes said he did before the murder

William Bailey testified that he met Stokes near the hotel The latter endeavored to persuade him to go into the hotel, but he declined, and as walking up Broadway met Stokes' brother, when both returned to the hotel, where they heard of the shooting of Fisk They then went by the station house to see Stokes While at the latter place they saw the boy Redmond, who on being asked what was the matter with him, said he was brought here as a witness to shooting, but was so frightened that he hardly knew how it happened

John Gibney testified that he saw Fisk arrive and go into the hotel and the boy Redmond shortly run out saying "Col Fisk is shot" Gibney went around to the front entrance and saw Stokes sitting on the bench with the porters Heard Porter ask Stokes what he came to the hotel for and Stokes said he came to see Mr ——, but the name was not heard by witness

P F Rockwell, a porter at the house, test fied that he was unable to find the parlors in the parlors the evening after the murder

Court then adjourned until Monday

The French National Assembly, Saturday, with but four dissenting votes ratified the treaty recently concluded, by Count de Remusort and Count Von Arnim governing for the evacuation of France by the Germans The committee to which the treaty was referred flatters the assembly for the firmness made to relieve the country from the presence of the Germans, but studiously avoids giving any credit to Thiers

The delay which has taken place in the fulfilment of the act of Dr Howard's release from prison by the Spanish Government is occasioned by the fact that Senor Martez requires on the part of the King's cousin that the United States minister in Madrid shall ask that Dr Howard may be pardoned by His Majesty, Amadeus. The American minister refuses to do so and maintains that Dr Howard is not guilty of crime and is unjustly held in detention by the Spaniards Sharp official notes have been exchanged between the Spanish foreign officers and Americans of the legation, and ministerial telegrams have been received from Washington on the subject

Secretary Fish on March 9 telegraphed our charge at Madrid recommending the citizenship of Dr Howard and directing a remonstrance against the proceedings of the Cuban court martial as a violation of the provision of the treaty, and to ask the immediate release of the prisoner Three days later Fish wrote in a letter to Vice-President Colfax (which was published in New York yesterday) reviewing the Howard case in a manner by no means favorable to the prisoner The Secretary shows that the long residence of Dr Howard in Cuba and his engagement of certain privileges to which are attached the right to become a Spanish subject, in some degree justified the authorities in regarding Dr Howard as a subject to their jurisdiction, while, on the other hand, he says nothing whatever had been brought forward in the doctor's behalf to illustrate or prove this assertion at any time of American citizenship until the misfortune of his arrest and imprisonment occurred. Secretary Fish in this letter goes on to review the evidence against Dr H, and declares it was of a character that would have convicted a party accused of the same offence during our war The Secretary adds "The strong point which prevents the intervention of this Government in behalf of Dr. Howard from becoming efficacious for his release is the fact that he has been regularly tried and found guilty by a duly constituted tribunal in the Island of Cuba"

The ratification of the treaty with Germany for the evacuation of France were exchanged Saturday The bill to arise a loan to meet the financial obligations of the treaty will be introduced in the Assembly to-day

The Baltimore Convention

A number of delegates to the Convention have left New York, including Governor Hoffman

A Baltimore dispatch announces the arrival of a large number of delegates to the Democratic Convention, among them Senator Kelly, of Oregon and B Tumpson, of Ohio It seems to be the general belief that Greeley will be nominated There is comparatively little loss of candidates, the excitement being mostly caused in the selection of a National Executive Committee, and of officers of the Committee There is a determined effort made to retain Belmont from the chairmanship of the Committee An attempt will be made to give the place to Wm E Nobusk of Iowa. Southern delegates evince a feeling against selecting either a temporary or permanent chairman from any of the seceded States, and of giving the former to the eastern of Middle States and the latter to the west A strong current is running in favor of making General John A McClernand, of Illinois, president of the convention He is popular mainly for his strong military reputation and political ability The principal names mentioned for the temporary chairmanship are Governor Thomas, of Maryland, Governor Vance, of North Carolina, and Thomas Brock, of Virginia. Governor Thomas will probably be the man Three members of the national committee who are in the city had a meeting Saturday to hear the report of the resident committee having in charge the arrangements for the meeting of the convention

A large number of New England delegates passed through New York on Saturday.

way to the Balt more Convention during the last twenty-four hours

A Baltimore special mentions a change in the programme and that neither Phillippe, Franco, Thomas or Gov. Vance stands a chance for temporary Chairman of the Democratic convention and that John Baldwin, of Virginia, is now prominent, while Thomas S Babcock and Jefferson Randolph, of the same State, and Gov English, of Connecticut, are spoken of The names of Gen Jas Shields, of Indiana, and Senator Casserly, of California, are talked of for permanent President, though Gen McClernan still has the inside track

The New York delegation has appointed Gov Hoffman chairman There seems to be not much doubt but that Greeley will be unanimously nominated on the first ballot It is not believed that the bolters of the convention will ever assemble

A Baltimore dispatch says that several hundred delegates to the Convention arrived yesterday, and a large majority of the entire number are already present. The leading hotels are overcrowded The principal topic of conversation is the policy of a straightout nomination, of Greeley and Brown and endorsement of the Cincinnati platform and nominees. A large majority of the delegates favor a straight-out nomination, but the action of the delegates at St Louis to adhere to the no nomination policy has had a decided effect in dampening the order of nomination advocates The St Louis delegates met last evening and it is probable they will reconsider their action with regard to the nomination policy A rumor prevailed that Augustus Schell will be placed on the next Democratic committee Ought not Belmont be among the representatives

Political.

In the whole State of New York there are only four Republican journals that advocate the Chappaqua philosopher's pretensions to the presidency One of the four is the philosopher's own paper In Pennsylvania there are only five Democratic journals that advocate Greeley, and not one Republican paper In Michigan there are only four out of thirty-two Democratic journals that swallow Greeleyism, and perhaps one or two obscure Republican concerns And this is the Republican whose candidacy was to split the Republican party in twain, and beat Grant!

The Woman's Journal shows the acuteness of the sex for which it speaks when it says "Cincinnati talks reform like Greeley Philadelphia acts reform like Grant Cincinnati begins its career by compromising its principles, by flattering its professions, and by excluding and ignoring women. Philadelphia continues the glorious march of Republican progress by extending its hand to the loyal women of the Republic, and pledge itself to the consideration of their rightful claims"

A shooting tragedy was enacted in Cincinnati yesterday afternoon, in which a boy of twelve years of age, named Frank Schept, the son of a widow, was shot and killed by the Rev Samuel J Brown, an aged local minister of the Methodist Church It appears that Brown has been for some time greatly annoyed by boys, who, in spite of repeated remonstrances, have entered his premises to take his fruit and commit other depredations Yesterday a number of boys were playing ball outside when the ball was thrown into Brown's yard and young Schept entered the premises to secure the ball, when the old man fired at him with slugs, one of the pieces striking him in the breast, inflicting a wound from which the boy died in a few moments Brown was arrested by two officers, and was subsequently released on $50 000 bail The terrible affair has created great excitement in the neighborhood of the Brighton House, near which it occurred A large crowd assembled in the evening in the vicinity of Mr Brown's house, which is guarded by a delegation of police, and there is danger from their temper that they will take the law into their own hands, should Brown be found It is the most remarkable case and it is hard to account for it save upon the presumption that Brown is not in his right mind He is eighty-six years of age, one of the oldest citizens, and has been considered hitherto above reproach For some time he has been quite childish He owns property to the amount of several hundred thousand dollars.

A few days ago a report reached Cincinnati of the severe flogging of Rev Thomas Calahan near Centerville, Reynolds county, Missouri, on the night of June 23d, by a band of disguised men Yesterday Calahan arrived in the city, having walked one hundred and twenty miles, when he took the railroad. He made a long statement to the United States marshal Newcomb, and United States Commissioner, Eaton, to the effect that he was chaplain of the Forty-first Infantry during the war, and went to Reynolds, Missouri, about a year ago from Clinton, Iowa, and was a strong Republican in politics. His troubles first originated in politics, but the whipping grew out of the fact that last November the court house of Reynolds county was burned, and again in May, destroying all the county records. Incendiarism was suspected, and Marion Johnson was indicted for the act on June 21st Calahan published a letter in the Irvinton Enterprise exonerating Johnson, but stating that he knew who did burn the court house, giving, however, no names On the night of the 23d, while he was watching his sick wife and child, seven men with blackened faces entered his house and dragged his wife from the bed, plundered the house, took him half a mile away and after attempting to make him tell who set fire to the court house gave him about seventy five lashes on his bare back with hickory switches and ordered him to leave the country in six days under penalty of death Calahan further stated that there is a corrupt court house ring in Reynolds County, against whom he was strongly opposed, and who were interested in the destruction of the county records to cover up their frauds in land titles. Calahan names the following persons supposed to have been engaged in whipping him J H. George, Sheriff of Reynolds county, J Parks, Clerk of the Circuit and County Courts, A M Parks, son of the County Clerk, Napoleon George, brother of the Sheriff, and two others whom he did not fully recognize United States Commissioner Eaton issued warrants for these men, and United States Marshal Newcomb took deputies to Reynolds county to arrest and bring them to St Louis Calahan's back still shows the effect of the whipping.

A later dispatch puts the loss by the West Albany fire at $900,000; insurance $10 000 The fire is supposed to have been incendiary

CHAS. CARSON,

And manufactured at his Mortar Mill, corner of Washington St. and Oil Creek R. R.

The ingredients for the mortar are proportioned by invariable rule They are of the best quality and mixed thoroughly—far better than can be done by hand in the old fashioned and expensive way It can be supplied in

Large Quantities on short Notice

For the last two years I have furnished this Mortar for various large buildings, among them the Farmers' Bank Block. Read the following remarks

ABOUT LIME, SAND, AND PROPORTIONS FOR MORTARS

Most men know that the lime and sand are the common ingredients in mortar, but there are several varieties and qualities of each, and that when they are properly selected, proportioned and commingled, they will form a cement and endure for ages On the other hand, we know that the great proportion of mortars as now made and used, soon crumble and waste away, and this exhibits the fact, that poor mortars are, in the end, very expensive.

One thing is certain, we either do, or do not know how to make them It we do know how they should be made, to last a century, then "let it be put in every one case that it shall be done" If we do not know, let us own the truth, and say so and learn

I believe that when good mortars are made, that it is more the result of "hippen-to-hit," than of knowledge and that some method or rule of proportioning the ingredients is sought for

To make the best mortar that can be made from the materials to be used, we should know how to proportion and commingle them

To make the very best we must know how to select as well as to proportion and commingle them

It is of no use to properly proport on mortar, if it is not properly prepared and thoroughly commingled. Man cannot be relied upon to do it Nothing but a machine will work mortar as it ought to be

I am prepared to sell County Rights for using Mortar Machines, for nearly all of Pennsylvania.

GOLD closed in New York yesterday at 11[illegible] to 11[illegible]

THE Auditor's report of the Titusville school funds will be found in another column

PERSONAL.—We omitted to mention a few days since the retirement of Mr W C Warner from the editorial staff of the Courier. We regret to part with Mr Warner from the field of journalism. He has engaged in business with John J Carter

ALEXANDER GILCHRIST one of the pioneer oil operators of this region, died at Pagundus on Saturday morning. He has no friends in this country, and his remains were taken in charge by the Mason ic Fraternity of Tidioute, and buried in their lot

SANITARY.—The attention of the Sanitary Committee is called to the smoking and powerful odors arising from the gutters in front of many of our fruit and vegetable stands, our restaurants, and groceries, and also in the rear of many of our hotels and boarding houses

THE Erie Gazette claims that the city is free from the scourge of small pox. One case however, said to have been shipped from Franklin to that city causes considerable consternation. She might just as well have small-pox to wake that sluggish city to activity, as nothing else will do it

RACING ON THE SABBATH.—We noticed yesterday a couple of intoxicated individuals, who, forgetting no doubt, that it was the Sabbath, drove at a break neck speed down Pine street. We made mention a short time ago of a similar offense, and we trust that this habit of racing horses on the Sabbath will be stopped and the offenders summarily dealt with

A LOST CHILD FOUND.—Mr George Lyons found a little three year old boy wandering round the streets yesterday afternoon, crying for his mamma. The little fellow could give no intelligible account of himself or of where he lived. Mr Lyons after a considerable search and inquiring, discovered that he was the son of Mr Lewis Myers, our city collector, and returned him to his parents

DUNKIRK WORKING BARREL.—We call attention to the advertisement of J H Van Buren, the manufacturer of this Working Barrel. It seems that some parties have infringed upon the patentee's rights, which the advertisement more fully sets forth. The authorized agents for this city are Wickham & Co for Oil City, Eaton Cole & Co and Chas. Robson & Co and for Parker's Landing, Chalfant & Graff

CROSSING THE GAP ON PINE STREET.—It might be a great accommodation to the public at temporary wooden bridges with railings were thrown over the trench on Pine street at the different crossings until the main sewer is completed and the water pipes are laid down. The gap at the crossings, both on Franklin and Martin streets, is a nuisance which would not be tolerated in a public thoroughfare in any other city on the continent. It is dangerous to cross on the planks as they are now laid, and the cost of small temporary bridges would be very trifling

PERSONAL.—In our notices of Fourth of July incidents we inadvertently omitted to chronicle the unanimous thanks of ninety of the Soldiers' Orphan School military company to Capt B N Hurd for a treat at the Marble Soda Fount in D W Wilson & Co's Drug Store. It was the more opportune and refreshing to the little fellows as it came after a long and dusty march under a hot sun. The old adage, "a fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind," is aptly illustrated by this act of Capt H, for he could well remember how often he had marched, as had the fathers of these boys, many a weary mile under a burning sun and longed for even a drink of water, so no wonder he was generously moved to remember the soldiers' orphans

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.—We are indebted to Mr George Sheffield for the particulars of another terrible boiler explosion which occurred on the afternoon of the 5th on the Gillespie Farm, near Pagundus, the particulars of which are as follows. The engineer, Mr John Aiken, was sitting in the engine house reading, when the deceased, Mr A C Tressett an operator on an adjoining lease, rushed into the engine house and informed Aiken that the building was on fire. He (Aiken) immediately tried to raise the safety valve to allow the steam to escape, there being a heavy head of steam on, but for some reason unknown failed, and forthwith turned his attention to the fire. In attempting to extinguish the flames the roof of the building fell on the engine, holding the safety valve down and preventing any escape of steam. While attempting to remove the roof of the boiler exploded, instantly killing Mr Tressett and severely injuring the engineer and another man, whose name we did not learn. The deceased was a man of exemplary habits and highly esteemed by all who knew him, and was a member of Oil Creek Lodge No 303 of this city. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his untimely death, and as we are informed, in very impecunious circumstances. His remains were sent to Buffalo for interment where he formerly resided. The engine and house were the property of Mr F Woodard, whose loss is estimated at about six hundred dollars

Spiritualism

RE DEDICATION OF THE TEMPLE BENAI ZION BY THE SPIRITUALISTS

Temple Benai Zion was a short time ago dedicated with great pomp and imposing ceremony to the worship of "Yah," the Great Jehovah, by the adherents of the Jewish faith, and yesterday it was dedicated without much ceremony by the Spiritualists as a temple wherein free speech, free thought and free religion would be preached according to the peculiar tenets of the new religion. Thus again extremes have met, and thus one of the oldest and one of the newest religious sects have joined hands under the same roof

At the usual hour of Sunday morning service (half-past ten) the Temple was thrown open, and the pews were speedily filled by a mixed audience, partly Spiritualist partly Israelitish, and a sprinkling of other denominations. Three speakers were advertised for the occasion—Professor E Whipple, of Chicago, Geo W Taylor, of Colima, and Mrs E L Watson, of Titusville. Mr Taylor was absent owing to sickness in the family and Mr Whipple mounted the rostrum. After a few introductory remarks he explained his platform and delivered an address, of which the following is a brief synopsis

Man is a spiritual and religious as well as an intellectual being. His spiritual nature has been developing and growing from the dim ages of the past and each successive age has seen an improvement towards perfection. Among the six or seven great religions, which have sprung into existence, they are all simply inventions of the human mind, and although much good is to be derived from all of them none can be held to be the perfect religion existent on this planet. Man came here as a barbarian, and his earliest religion was necessarily of the crudest kind. It can be traced through the various stages of improvement, and as with all government we can prove by the experience and result of past religions, and upon them build a new and improved system. As no one will assume that God gave man his improvements in machinery, art, and science, so no one can correctly hold that man's religion was of divine origin, or that it was anything more than the result of natural mental development. The attributes of the human mind are universally distributed wherever man exists, and religious thought which is a part of his nature diverges and is determined by extern l influences of climate, topography, temperature, and general surroundings. Religions are divided into two elements, which may be termed natural and special. They all have the golden rule and the moral law, but their specialities differ materially. The religion of Jesus does not differ from others in generalities. He taught the same moral law and golden rule that others taught, but his followers have added to his teaching the speciality that man has fallen and requires redemption through divine intervention. This is a special theology, which is the system adopted by the Christians of the present day. Every nation adopts its own religion, best suited to its own peculiar surroundings and advancement. The Chinese believe that the founder of their religion was partly divine and partly human. He had many followers and it is claimed that at the time of his birth he stood on his feet like a little man, and spoke as never man spake, while heavenly music and joyful sounds filled the surrounding atmosphere. After preaching his religion through many trials and vicissitudes, he, at the age of eighty-four, ascended into heaven and his footprint on the rock from whence he ascended is shown at the present day. These extraordinary claims we cannot concede, but he was the founder of the religion of one third of the human race and one of the oldest religions on record. His religion partakes of the generalities of the moral law and the golden rule. So it is with the religion of Jesus, the founder of Christianity. A great many specialities are claimed for him which cannot be conceded. They were both, however, useful links in the progressive system which leads on to perfection

"Make the great past thy servant, not thy king."

This should be our motto. These religions possess much of beauty and much of grandeur, and the good is worthy of our imitation and adoption

Catholicism is more a representative of Christianity than Protestantism. It forbids progress, freedom of thought and individuality, and endeavors to bring all mankind under its special belief and peculiar idiosyncrasies. No class of religious teachers are more thoroughly educated both in literature and the arts and sciences than are the Catholic clergy. Yet they oppose the progress and advancement of civilization, because it interferes with their special theological system. Protestantism did not spring altogether from the evils in the Catholic Church, but from a growing desire for freedom of thought in man, a stage in the great development of the human mind, against which all religious creeds are irresistible. It was not Luther alone who spoke but the spirit of the age. He merely entered the wedge which split up and divided the Christian church, and Protestantism has suffered continual disintegration ever since. This was the beginning of the new era of religious freedom and individual belief. It was a great turning point, in the present movement, which leads man back to first principles, and to his natural freedom of thought and natural religion. We have been here only a few thousand years, and the earth is millions of years of age. It may take some time yet but we shall reach freedom eventually. If all the best and the purest religion is in the past, we have no incentive to future improvement. All mankind are naturally inspired towards advancement and improvement in religion. We are now only in the incipient stage. God hides behind all the visible forms of nature, and man is one of the most wonderful of His creation. We shall, after a while, throw off all this imperfection which enshrouds our mortal and religious faculties and bloom out in our full spiritual development

America has been reserved for great destinies, here we have struggled for political liberty and we may, in the remote future, have to go through a still more desperate struggle for religious liberty. The Catholic church aspires to absolute control on this continent, and at present they are simply making a "cats paw" of the Protestants. It is a powerful movement and will probably result in bloodshed. When christianity first dawned upon mankind paganism had possession of the political power, the schools and the wealth and the learning of the nations, but christianity succeeded. And why? Because it was something new, something which promised more freedom of thought and more natural rationality. It, however, soon became corrupt, and man was again enthralled under priestly subjection. To-day christianity has political power, has possession of the schools, wealth and learning of the nation. OUR NEW RELIGION is struggling for existence, as christianity did when paganism had possession. But we shall triumph over christianity. And why? Because we stand upon a platform of advancement which promises everything which is dear to the religious emotions of the human heart.

In the dedication of this beautiful edifice to-day, it would be customary to dedicate it to the service of God. But we dedicate it to our new religion, to our new platform of religious liberty, to juvenile instruction and to freedom of thought. We will here advocate free speech and assert to as complete communion with God and with nature as any of the other religious denominations.

Mr Whipple delivered another lecture in the afternoon, and Mr E L Watson addressed a large audience in the evening.

The spirit under control, of whom she spoke, made an apology toward the close, for the disorganized condition of the medium. The language was very poetical and appeared to have a profoundly crystalizing effect upon the audience. It was also full of exalted aspirations. So much was this the case, that our reporter found it extremely difficult to gather the points. The following, however, are some of the leading features of the discourse reduced to ordinary language

There are great mental and spiritual possibilities within the reach of man. The time was when man was satisfied with material types of the great author of our being, but that time is in the distant past. All the ancient dogmas and religious tenets are "crystalized beyond the hope of reanimation." The cry that comes up from the human breast to-day is for new light and a new religion. We are only beginning to understand the uses of the past and the necessities of the future. We can rebuild a new superstructure upon a new foundation. "We are born of a new electrical atmosphere," and ask for new ideas and new knowledge. We have been told with a the past few days that anything which cannot be explained by reason must be rejected, as it borders on the superstitious and the miraculous. We cannot explain why a blade of grass grows, yet we must admit that it does grow. There is nothing dearer to the human heart than intercourse with the loved ones who have crossed the threshold, and we cannot explain this upon any materialistic basis, yet we know it is true. When we allow our reasoning faculties to become "illuminated" by a new light suddenly we shall lose sight of the material and preserve the immaterial. There is scarcely anything which we can prove from a materialistic point of view alone, it must be preceded or accompanied by a spiritual impression. Man's spiritual nature must be aroused before he can receive the laws which govern science, or the truisms of logic and mathematics. Theology and science are antagonistic, but theology is not necessarily spiritual nor religious. Religion and science can clasp hands as Judaism and Spiritualism do to-day. I will deal with the new light. It has been dealt by a previous speaker that a great conflict was coming between "Crystalized Dogmas" and the new movement. Let this over be a moral and a bloodless one, although science has wrought much change in the world and has compelled the freedom of thought born in the 19th century. There is a provision for all the demands of man's moral nature. Shall we live again, has been the question which theology only partially answers. We can prove it by our new religion we can hold converse with the dear ones in another world. This is a legitimate outgrowth of our spiritual nature. It does not follow that we are superstitious if we believe what we cannot materially prove. "Where is the voice of my beautiful speaker?" Man can now climb up among the angels. Let us believe that man goes upward rather than downward that he progresses rather than retrogrades. Let us believe in man's goodness rather than in his badness. All we have to do is to give greater scope to our spiritual development. This new religion opens up a new sphere for woman. One hundred females receive improvements to one male. This is easily accounted for by her higher religious nature and her susceptibility to good impressions

PLAGIARISM is bad enough, but when not only another's ideas are appropriated, but the very words he uses to express his ideas, the case is serious. But what shall we say when the case is a poetical one? For instance, in the Sunday Morning News of June 30 we find the following Written for the Sunday Morning News

There are some spirits fly strung,

The last two verses are limpy and hardly up to the first three, but then the afflatus may have given out, or the reason may have been that the first three were written at least the three years ago, for we find the following verses in a little book called the Flower Vase, edited by Miss S C Edgarton and copyrighted in Massachusetts by A C Bigley in 1843

It has been generally believed that Grace Greenwood wrote the above lines, but we see how easy it is to be mistaken. We must now credit them to Titusville talent. It is just barely possible that both are equally entitled to the author ship, for do not "all great minds run in the same channels?"

BEEF TONGUES at C F Laurie's "Red Front" Grocery.

Beecher (T K.) as a Fourth of July Orator.

Shall we ever have heart to celebrate the Fourth of July again, or to read the Declaration of Independence, to speak for the Union, or to let fly the Flag? Has Thomas K Beecher not shown us the mistake and folly of such proceedings? Has he not awakened us as from a dream? Has the country been nothing the drivelling fool for ninety six years, or has Thomas K Beecher been making an ass of himself? Titusville has had some bitter humiliations lately. Barnum's was a conspicuous "sell," and when the grand humbug dragged itself out of town, there went up from an incensed community a howl of rage louder and madder than the voices of its beasts. But Barnum's was bliss compared with the exhibition which Beecher made of himself.

If the Committee, say some, had wished to make the celebration a failure, they could not have succeeded more perfectly than by letting Beecher talk down the day and the country the way he did. But the Committee have this excuse, that Beecher was Hobson's choice. They had telegraphed east, west, north and south in vain, and when Beecher asked $100 for his address they thought it would be particularly good and edifying. It must be confessed they caught a Tartar, and that Democrats have a right to snicker Beecher was hired because of the family name. Great things were argued from a brother of Harriet Beecher Stowe. She wrote the most famous American novel of the age, and we had just put her in one of the highest niches of our literary Pantheon, when in an eccentric and unaccountable hour she shocked even men, who are not easily shocked by anything, as well as women who are credited with more sensibility, by some confidential reminiscences of the poet Byron, now beyond speech and calumny, by an incestuous tale "that better to oblivion were consigned than hung on high to poison half mankind." Then Thomas was a half-brother, too, of Henry Ward Beecher, who is a prodigy in his way, and whose latest literary venture is a sublime attempt to rival the fidelity and correct the errors of the four Evangelists in a biography of Our Lord

But Harriet and Henry are wonderful creatures, and Henry Ward is growing almost into a Shakespeare among the interpreters of life and nature, in insight and universality, and we might add in liberality. But Thomas has their oddities without their genius or common sense, with a love of paradox and a lack of reverence, and an itching for combatting received opinions, creeds and sentiments of all sects and parties, and offending most wantonly cherished memories and institutions. If a man cares for neither country nor church, if he thinks his fathers were old fools, if he has no moorings or attachments, then we should say Beecher was his man. Why according to this Beecher, give him pen, ink and paper and a glass of lager, and he can produce you a document that will throw the Declaration of Independence in the shade, and make Thomas Jefferson forgotten

We are not disposed to exact too much of an orator, to try him by too high a standard. We expect of course our money's worth. We can excuse him if no gleam of eloquence or of wit illuminates his discourse if nature has not given him those dazzling gift. But one thing an audience of a community has a right to insist that a speaker, however he may fall below an inspiration of the occasion shall not violate its spirit, shall not insult the memories of the day we celebrate, shall not sneer at the Declaration of Independence, and when the war for the Union is just over, and the Union wraps up in its name and entity, all that we fought for, or glory in that he shall not eulogise and embalm with his praise the disunion sentiments and policy of "State Rights." We do not ask a partizan speech, a ratification of Grant and Republicanism, or Greeley and Democracy, but we ask an American speech, and we believe there is common ground enough for all citizens to stand on, and memories in which they can feel a common pride, and hopes in which they can take a common pleasure. We have not further time to-day to discuss this double-headed affair, except to pity the author, his bad taste and wrecked judgment, and maudlin political philosophy, which neither the past or present can approve and justify

New Books.

New Zealand is a good way off, but it is more civilized than many a State in Europe for America to-day. An English colony like a Western State soon learns all the parent can teach, and receives all it can bestow. But New Zealand is to the English colonist, what Texas or California are to this country, something will and peculiar in its situation and history, and with riches that belong to its own soil and clime. This book records the expeditions, adventures and emergencies diversifying the daily life of a New England sheep farmer, and the writer is one that knows how to make the most of life, how to accommodate herself to all exigencies, how to paint what she sees, how to find enjoyment in the company she meets. She tells us about two months at sea and of Melbourne, of pastoral life, of society, and houses and servants, of a Christmas picnic, of floods, and snow storms and christenings, of wild cattle hunting, and a hundred things more. It is a good book to read under the shade tree, while taking a nap, or on journey. It amuses you without hilarity and gives you the impression of a lady full of life and a charming travelling companion

A CARD.—The Col Drake House Company desire to return their sincere thanks to the Courier House Company for the polite and gentlemanly conduct extended to us by them both before and after the contest for the silver trumpet on the Fourth of July, which they so bravely won, and, after receiving their well-earned prize, were willing to sacrifice it on the altar of friendship by present ing it to us and we trust that the friendship begun under such favorable circumstances will ever be held in grateful remembrance and be the link to bind us together as friends and brother firemen, and by our united efforts establish a friendship between us that will be life long in its duration. Our thanks are also due to Mr D A Wray and ladies for refreshments, also to Mr William H Abbott for courtesies extended, not omitting our veteran fireman, Mr Alex Smith, ex-chief of the Altoona Fire Department, for cigars and refreshments

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Starvation in the Midst of Plenty—A living man is continually exerting mechanical force and giving off heat and in proportion he is continually undergoing a loss of weight—that is to say, a loss of substance. This lifelong production of heat and of mechanical force is not suspended even during sleep. Not to go further, sleep does not interrupt respiration—a clearly mechanical function. As to the generation of heat it is unnecessary to insist. It is plain that this ceaseless manifesting of vital force with its accompanying and strictly proportioned waste could not continue to exist. The man would dwindle to nothing. But long, before the effects of this gradual diminution become apparent, they are felt in the form of two imperious sensations—hunger and thirst. To still these cravings to restore the lost weight and to put the man in a position still to keep on losing weight (at the price of keeping on producing heat and mechanical force) it is necessary that he should be supplied with three things—air, water and food. Now simply receiving food into the stomach is not truly receiving food into the system. Strictly speaking, food lying in the stomach is truly without and not within the body as is food held in the hollow of the closed hand. Only when it has been thoroughly digested and assimilated can it be said that it is truly received into the system. But how all this is the organism in a position to assimilate sufficient food? What are the consequences? The outcome exceeds the income and the bodily strength fails because the system can no longer keep up the mutually balancing waste and renovation. Here it is that a tonic stimulant (such as Dr Fisch's Bitters) proves so beneficial—it might almost be said so indispensable

FISHER NORRIS & CO.
PETROLEUM CENTRE, Pa Dec 23 1871.

The Career of a Great Remedy.—Twenty summers have elapsed since it was briefly announced that a new vegetable tonic and alterative, bearing the name of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, had been added to the list of Preventive and Restorative medicines. The modest advertisement which then attested its preparation stated that it had been used with great success, in private practice, as a cure for dyspepsia, bilious complaints, costiveness and intermittent fever. It was confidently asserted that the article possessed such a mild property that all people of every class, tested its merits as a tonic stimulant, nervine and restorative and found that its effects more than fulfilled their hopes and expectations. From that time to the present its course has been upward and onward and it stands to-day at the head of all medicines of its class, American or imported, in the magnitude of its sales and its reputation as a safe agreeable and potent invigorant and restorative. For languor and debility, lack of appetite and gastric disturbances, so common during the summer months, it is absolutely infallible. Indigestion, biliousness, constipation, nervousness, periodical fevers, and all the ordinary complaints peculiar to a vitiated and humid atmosphere, vanish under its renovating and regulating influence. This is a strong record, vouched by volumes of intelligent testimony, extending over a period of a fifth of a century, and comprehending the names of thousands of well known citizens belonging to every class and calling. In Europe it is thought a great thing to obtain the patronage or royalty from a patent medicine, but Hostetter's Bitters has been spontaneously approved by millions of independent verdicts and its patent consists in their endorsement protestations of friendship, and a sincere determination on the part of the members of the press not to forget their reception and superb treatment in the oil metropolis. Returning to the cozy residence of our friend Col Cogswell, who with his wife so kindly and generously entertained us during our visit, we were soon sleeping off the fatigues of the day of pleasure, and indulging in bright visions of the future greatness and glory of Titusville.

But Titusville doesn't do things by halves, and when her guests returned to the train next morning to start for Pittsburgh and return homeward, the music of the band preceded them as they again rode in the equipages of the oil princes, by whom they were escorted to the depot, Col Cogswell, Mr. Garfield, President of the Oil Exchange, Geo K Anderson and other gentlemen accompanying us as far as Oil City The dust and oppressive heat and general "misery" of the day's journey over the A V Railroad, were almost unthought of in the recollection of the pleasant time spent among our many old as well as new-found friends.

Arrived at Pittsburgh, travel-stained and weary, a condition somewhat mollified by an excellent though late dinner at the Union Depot Hotel, the summer meeting of the State Editorial Association of Pennsylvania adjourned sine die, satisfied that a better excursion could not have been planned

We had intended giving the names of the ladies and gentlemen of the party, but have not the space to-day The resolutions adopted at the Titusville banquet will be found in condensed form in another column

From the Erie Observer

Here is what the Erie Observer says of the citizens of Erie, who did entertain the editors in a very good manner

THE EDITORS.—We have never admired the enterprising people of the Oil Region more than since we have learned of their hospitable reception of the editorial excursionists They saw in it the opportunity to display their hospitality in a way that would tell, and most nobly did they receive their distinguished guests. The excursion party reached Oil City by way of the Union & Titusville Railroad, and were cordially greeted at every point At Oil City a band was in waiting and the whole population apparently turned out to welcome them They were shown the main points of attraction and before leaving were treated to a magnificent repast spread at the expense of the city Splendid as their reception was at Oil City, that at Titusville was even finer The excursionists stopped in the latter city over night and their entire stay was a continued ovation They were met at the depot by two bands, and thousands of people The citizens had turned out with their carriages, in which the editors were escorted to their stopping places free of charge The private residences were thrown open to them, and they were the recipients of the most lavish attentions. A grand banquet was given in their honor, and a magnificent ball wound up the events of the day The citizens paid every expense, and an impression was left upon the minds of the excursionists that will always cause them to remember the oil country with kindness How different from here, where it was hardly possible to rouse a single person to the opportunity afforded our citizens. "Would that we had some of the Titusville spirit in Erie"

And cost his mother twenty dollars."

The lively little English sparrows imported into New York have done good service in their adopted home. The measuring worm has succumbed to their watchful eyes and sharp beaks. Since this triumph they have selected flies and mosquitoes as the dainties with which to regale themselves

The two most engaging powers of an author are to make new things familiar, and familiar things new.—Thackeray

Detroit has a street sprinkler named "Good Templar," which prominently displays the advertisement of a wholesale liquor firm

The inmates of Auburn prison have set an example worthy of imitation in nearly every boarding house in the land They mutinied against bad meat Thursday

The Danbury News says A young lady writes to learn why we do not have a department for "answers to correspondents" The reason is simple We once announced we would gladly receive questions on various topics and endeavor to answer them satisfactorily The first inquiry received was in relation to a little amount we owed the writer We think it was eight dollars. We borrowed the money and returned a "satisfactory answer," but it put book out that one fall a year The young lady thinks such a department would be lively We found it so

At the funeral of a wife, the undertaker arranged for the husband and mother-in-law to ride in the same carriage 'Must I," said the broken-hearted man, "must I ride with that awful woman?' "I think you will have to," answered the undertaker 'O Mr Undertaker, how can I ride with that dreadful woman?' "It will disturb every carriage of the procession to make a change" said the man of business, "and you must ride here' "Well, if I must, I must," said the stricken man, 'but to ride with her destroys all my pleasure on this occasion.'

Concerning clerical drinking in Scotland an American gentleman writes from Edinburgh to a friend "Saturday night in Cork and Dublin seems to be given over to one huge drunk—Glasgow the same I don't know how it may be here to-night, but if the Presbyterian ministers who are attending the grand Presbyterian Council here are a fair sample, Edinburgh must be the drunkenest place in the world. I saw a number of them at dinner at our hotel, yesterday, take enough of sherry, champagne, claret, brandy and hot Scotch to send a great many Yankees under the table."

Our sporting contributor observes that the first one-handed "mill" on record was fought between David and Goliath when the latter "knocked the first round out of the ring with a sling shot."

DOCTOR PIERCE'S

ALTERATIVE OR

CURES DISEASES OF THE

THROAT, LUNGS, LIVER & BLOOD

In an wonderful medicine to which the attention of the whole public is hereby directed is the discovery by the celebrated Dr Pierce of a remedy for Consumption, the most fatal and insidious of all the diseases which afflict humanity. Hitherto medical science has been baffled in its efforts to cure this dreadful malady, and the sick have been left to drift on to the last stage of the disease, when death has finally taken them. In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, with only the first stage of Consumption, it has shown itself the most efficacious of all preparations ever tried. It is a great and powerful cleanser of the blood. When once it gets into the system it ferrets out the germs of disease and purifies the blood. By its great and powerful alterative properties it cures Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Blotch, Pimple, or Eruption. It cures Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short all humors from whatever cause they arise, if the case is not of long standing and the constitution is not too much impaired by the disease to admit of a cure. It also cures the worst forms of Erysipelas, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Tumors, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short all humors from whatever cause they arise, if the case is not of long standing and the constitution is not too much impaired by the disease to admit of a cure. It also cures the worst forms of Erysipelas
